

Meg Collins
Associate, Resonance Inc.

Meg in one sentence or less

A thoughtful over-achiever and who builds her case (for anything really) with an attention to detail that is nothing short of elegant.

Meg's 3-point professional profile

- Meg cut a swath through her legal studies at UNB, with a list of scholarships and awards a mile long, and a judicial internship under her belt before she even graduated.
- With her juris doctor in hand, Meg was called to the bar while working as an associate at a regional law firm – solidifying her research and brief-building expertise while juggling the needs of a variety of internal clients.
- She knows how to construct a clear and persuasive argument, get to the core of an issue, and recommend remedies for thorny problems – no matter how entrenched.

Meg's recent accomplishments

- ☆ Meg recently received an prize for Best Directed Research Paper for her comprehensive research paper outlining the legislative framework associated with the Infirm Persons Act, and recommending legislative reform.
- ☆ In her final year of her studies for her Juris Doctor, Meg served as a judicial intern for Justice Marc Richard, Chief Justice of New Brunswick. In this capacity she assisted with legal research at the appellate level, and acted as an observer at the Court of Appeal.

Credentials

2019	Juris Doctor University of New Brunswick
	Lieutenant Governor of New Brunswick Silver Medal with Distinction University of New Brunswick
2017	Gowling WLG (Canada) LLP Prize in Advocacy University of New Brunswick
2016	Bachelor of Arts University of King's College

Work history

2020 – Current

Workplace consultant – Associate Lawyer, Resonance Inc. (Saint John NB)

Resonance Inc. provides a suite of workplace services including governance advice and training, workplace assessments, workplace investigations, conflict resolution, mediation, and workplace restoration. Resonance is dedicated to improving workplaces from culture to productivity.

2018– 2020

Student-at-law/Associate, Stewart McKelvey (Saint John NB)

Stewart McKelvey is a leading Atlantic Canadian full-service law firm, offering clients expertise in corporate/commercial transactions and litigation, personal injury law and general litigation. Primary tasks include legal research, drafting correspondence, reports and opinions for clients, drafting legal submissions, including originating processes and briefs, attending legal proceedings including hearings, discoveries, and arbitrations and taking detailed notes, communicating with opposing counsel and organizing and summarizing client material and disclosure

Affiliations

Meg is a member of the Canadian Bar Association and the Law Society of New Brunswick.